This week I have created my own GUI for our project prototype. It is a bit time taking process. I have collected initial parts of our website and it is working on now at the address: http://www.ceng.metu.edu.tr/~e1347863/karinca/, but its contents are not okay yet.

For the design stage I am responsible for the editors. So I am preparing for this now on.

Since last week we decided on each group member must bring a first own prototype of the project to the meeting, I have done a GUI Design of our project. I have taken the debugger module design of our project so I have began to search about available Javascript debuggers on the internet to help me designing our debugger of the project. Since I also took the panel design of our project, I began to determine which functionalities each panel will have to help developing applications.
