Last week, we have improved the demonstration prepared for our assistant. We have added some more capabilities to the code that we had written. Our first demonstration code was simply sending the posted articles to only one specified mail address. This situation did not meet the requirements of our project. For this purpose we developed the cron module and made it able to connect to the user database and fetch the mail addresses of the users subscribed to a specific newsgroup. But sending an article to multiple clients was still constituting a problem for us. In order to overcome with this problem we decided to analyze the methods of sending mails to the multiple users in an efficient way. We are still dealing with this issue.
