Last week, we had done the integration of all the codes. We had also finished unit testing. We had done the presentation to the class. We have to submit our final package this week, so we have to finish all the topics related to our project.

This week, after finishing the integration, we have done the integration testing.

For final package, we have started to documentation. We had written installtion manual for admin and for general users separately. Moreover, we have written user manual for both admin and user. For documentation, we captured screen shots of the program.

Our product, NewScore, is an open source and environment independent program. So we are glad if anyone wants to develop our project. For this reason, we have written a developer’s guide. It contains the explanation of the project, including classes and jsp pages.

We have finished the integration, testing, documentation of our project, NewScore. We have prepared our final package including the following:

- Installation files
- Source code to build our applications
- Installation and users manual
- Developer’s guide
- Jar files of the system

We have submitted our final package and also put it to NewStreamLine’s web page.

We are all glad to work on Universal News Server topic, and develop ourselves.
