I made some personal meetings with Çağatay and talked over the scope of the project. This part is the most crucial part of our requirement analysis report and we have to think over this in detail. Also I started to make a gannt chart and dealt with the estimation calculations to include in the report. Also I updated the website.

I dealt with the introduction part of the report. In the introduction, I will mainly talk about the needs of the users and how much of this need we could satisfy. And I have written the project definition.

I observed the old requirement analysis reports and with the aid of the outline that Sinan made, I did a work sharing. As, parts of the report are somewhat independent of other parts, it is best if we can write our parts on ourselves and join them afterwards. I will deal with the project specifications, DFD and use-case diagrams. So this week I thought on the user interface and the scope of the functionalities that the program will provide. Also I downloaded the graphics engine Open Scene Graph (which our assistant advised us to use) and observed it to decide if it is suitable for our project.

I elaborated the outline of the requirement analysis report I made last week. I have written a brief overview of the literature survey we made in the second week. This will be included in the requirement analysis report.
