I observed osg and fmod libraries and tried to decide which classes will be appropriate for our project. With this information, I will try to design the classes and which library function will be used in our program routines. These designs will be included in our initial design report.

I observed the initial design reports of the previous years' reports. I tried to make an outline for our new report. I tried to design the user interface, we are planning to add rough sketches of our user interface in our report.

I investigated mainly the .NET development Environment. I made small user interfaces to learn the usage of graphical components. I tried to learn how to run managed and unmanaged C++ code together. We have to use managed C++ extensions to build the GUI, because .NET does not provide components for unmanaged C++. I also planned the initial design report with my partners.

I read the reports of the last year's projects and see that we will need lots of use case and DFD diagrams. I sketched some of the use case diagrams in Smartdraw.
