Week Reported: 22-29.March.2012

Progress:

For this iteration, I was responsible for implementing P2P communication layer between our agents. This week I developed the server/client communication architecture that I implemented last week and made it possible for each agent to open a server socket. Now, it is possible to send a message to the agent running on the desired port just running a simple thread, yet we could not integrate the communication to the user interface for now.
